Frequently Asked Questions

If you've been in an accident, one thing is for sure: you have questions. Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about auto accident injuries in our firm.

Should I call the police after my accident?

Yes! A police report will contain useful information like the other driver's personal information, including their insurance, as well as accident details. If someone is injured it is even more important that the authorities be called so they get the medical attention they need, and that the injuries be put in the police report.

What if I miss work because of my accident-related injuries? Can I be compensated?

You should discuss your concerns about being able to perform your job duties with your doctor. If they instruct you to take some time off of work, you may be entitled to the money that you would have earned during that time. If you are unable to perform the same job permanently because of your injury, you may be entitled to compensation for loss of income capacity.

What should I do with my medical bills after my accident?

Your health is the most important thing, so get all the treatment that you need to recover. Be sure to provide your attorney with all the insurance forms and receipts for the medication and treatment you undergo.

How to keep your family safe trick or treating this Halloween

--If they are going with a group, be sure that there is adult supervision present.

--Older kids should have a planned route and a set time to come home.

--Choose areas that are heavily populated and well lit, especially as it will be getting dark much earlier near Halloween.

--Your kids should have flashlights, glow sticks or reflective material to make sure cars (and you!) can see them easily.

Driving Safe in the Rain

Here in one of the longest dry spells the Seattle area has had in a long time, it seems like everyone is waiting for it to rain. When it finally does happen, make sure that you remember how to stay safe in less than ideal conditions with these tips:

- 1) Stay alert! Of course this is always true, but even more so when visibility is decreased by the rain. You also need to be aware of other drivers, who may lose control of their vehicle or fail to see you.
- 2) Leave more room. The distance that you might be comfortable following at should be increased at least 3x in the rain. You don't want to be caught unable to stop quick enough if someone slams on their brakes.
- 3) Turn on your lights. Even during the day, putting on your headlights in the rain can help you to be seen.
- 4) Check your tires. The condition your tires in is directly related to how much traction you can get on the slick roads. Make sure yours are in top shape.
- 5) If you hydroplane, don't panic. Let off the gas and steer straight or turn slightly into the direction you need to go. Do not make any sudden movements.
- 6) Watch out for motorcycles. Even more so in the rain, motorcycles can be difficult to see.
- 7) Allow more time for travel. Traffic is a daily occurrence in Seattle, but somehow the rain makes everything move a lot slower. Be prepared to wait!
- 8) Don't use cruise control. In a hydroplaning situation, this could actually cause your car to accelerate. Best to handle it yourself.
- 9) Check your wipers. You may not have noticed the wear and tear that last year did to your wipers in these dry months. Make sure you are ready for those extra rainy days.
- 10) Beware of the roads after a dry spell! After these months of dry roads, engine oil and grease mixed with rain make for very slick roads.
